THE London Press join in a chorus of satis faction at the pacific settlement of the recent difficulty with China which though no altogether surprising may prove to be somewhat premature. The Pall Mall Gasette alone seems to remember that the real value of the guarantees obtained by Sir Thomas WADE can only be declared by the event. While admitting the general satisfactory nature of the intelligence received, it says :-"The concessions which it announces are still in the region of promise; and although of course performance cannot in affairs of this kind follow instantaneously upon promise, yet this is rather an argument against He resides ut Cambridge, in England, and rest such a case with any chance of success undue impatience than in favour of relaxed effort. In short, we must not too hastily infer that our Chinese difficulty is entirely be sucathe defendant to recover the sum of $27.75 consideration, and that plaintiff was induced by at an end, and that we may now turn away from the subject with a feeling of complete relief. On the contrary, a continued exercise of vigilance and firmness will be requisite to keep the Chinese Government up to their word, and the same sort of pressure which had to be employed to extort the promise must, if necessary, be again resorted to to secure its performance." This is a sensible view of the question, and coincides with that entertained pretty generally by those who best understand the way in which the Peking Authorities are wont to carry out their obligations. Whilst pressure is being the following clause is added also signed by the this climate, and the holiday which Mr. Black put upon them they will concede almost anything asked, though unwillingly and sometimes, ungraciously enough. But once ing it; also, that it contains every compensa, members of the establishment in a very liberal lot the pressure be relaxed, and they will not be long before they contrive to evade fulfilling the stipulations obtained by gentle compulsion. There is every need for the warning which the Pall Mall so distinctly gives, the more so as the tendency with English statesmen is to surrender later on that which they WAGES IN BRITISH SHIPS. In 1848 the average rate per month was 48s. coming down to 1864, we find the average it that year to be 56s., while in 1874 it stood within a fraction of 70s, per month. From these figures it will be seen that whereas the average rate rose only 10s. during the seventeen years from 1848 to 1864, it has advanced 14s. during the last ten years. We frequently see statements to the effect that sailors are underpaid, but it may be questioned whether the wages of any class of men have risen to such an extent, and so rapidly, as those of seamen have done within the last few years. A glance at the table to month is a common rate of pay, while in some cases 90s, and even 100s, is the amount carned per month. Nor does it seems that employvient had been source. According to a footnote to this return the Enperintendent at Poplar, in speaking of both 1872 and 1873, reports that *there has been a very limited supply of seamen throughout the year. Masters have managed to fill up their crows (sometimes with difficulty), but have had no choice." Now, 70s., 80s., and 100s, per month means something like £40, £50, and £60 per year, and out of this the seamen has simply to provide himself with clothing. With the exception of the time he chooses to pass on shore, he is never under the necessity of spending a single penny. And we think that for men employed in an occupation where nothing more than common intelligence combined with a certain amount of practical experience, is required, this rate of pay can by no means be considered inadequate.—Nautical Migazine.

THE CHARGE OF THE SIX HUNDRED. The old soldiers of the Light Cavalry Brigade, the men who "rode into the Valley of Death" on that fatal October morning one and twenty. years ago, were invited to attend a meeting last night to make arrangements for a dinner celebration of the anniversary of the Balaklava charge. The trysting-place was the Prince of Wales Tavern, Villiers street, Strand, and the hour fixed for the nuster was nine o'clock, to enable those engaged in business to put-in an appearance. In consequence of the disagreeable drizzling rain, notiso many came as were expected, but a respectable contingent, in every sense of the word, of war-worn veterans answered to the roll-call all the same. Hale, hearty men they were the most of them; but so portly of build that they set one wondering what sort of a light cavalry that must have made where the weight in the pig-akin ran up to eighteen atone of living flesh in sandry instances. Jevial of manner and nest of address, they discussed the matter before them as one might have expected in brief, soldierly and most harmonious manner. It was agreed that a dinner should be solemnized in the Charing Cross Hotel-is not columnized the correct word, for has not Charles Lever defined a dinner as a social sagrament?—on the 25th of October, and it was stated that many officers who had helped to write one of the most brilliant. pages in our military annals had promised to give the event the anaction of their presence. The greater part of those in the room had belonged to the Eleventh Hussars, that distinguished corps having been principally THE LONDON ASSURANCE recruited in London. One warrior had served his apprenticeship to arms under De Lacy Evans in Spain; another was remarkable as having borne the flag of truce to the Russian lines the day after Balaklava; a third was never tired of celebrating the hauts faits of his ancient Captain, Sir Roger Palmer, who led the E Troop of the Eleventh into action, and did his - slaughter with cold steel, having forgotten his prepared to grant Insurances as follows:---revolver in the harry to jump into the saddle. After the formal proceedings were over, there was some rare gossip over the former campaign, and the non-military observer was enabled topick up some interesting reminiscences. It is a curious circumstance that every man but one who won that supremest of all military. Trumpet-Major Crawford dashed by, his good steed stumbled, the rider was dismounted, and his naked sabre went whirling from his grasp. A pair of Cossacks saw their opportunity and spurred upon the defenceloss Orawford; but Parkes confronted them and kept them at bay. When the retreat come the two brave fellows followed their comrades and were pursued by Fire to the extent of $40,000, on Buildings of six Russians; but Parkes, with his single sword, held them at arm's length and retired slowly. fighting and defending the Trumpet-Major. until deprived of his weapon by a shot. This is no rodomentade, but plain fact, as recorded in the Gazette. Lieutenant Alexander Robert Duna, of Cardigan's boys, was another hero of that day, fruitful in heroes. He saved the life of Sergeant Bentley, of his own corps, by cutting down two or three Russian troopers who were attacking bim from the rear, and afterwards hewed to the chin a Russian hosear who had: failen upon Private Leveti. This Dunn, it will be remembered, afterwards commanded the Thirty-third, being the youngest man of his THE SECOND COLONIAL SEA AND rank in the army, and perished in the Abyssinian expedition. Riding-muster Joseph Malone had bis borse shot in the charge, but, properly speaking, his bit of glorium gun-metal was gained the day previous, when he volunteered with three troopers, on the march to Balaklava, and captured an escort of the enemy's onvalry and the baggage they were conveying to Sebasto pol. The courageous Irishman, Farrell, who had lost his horse, like the majority of his plucky companions, and had gone near to losing his life, was awarded the envied honor, but did not long survive to wear it. Obarles Wooden, now a Quartermaster in the One Hundred and Pourth Foot, was another of the Seventeenth Lancers who carned the Cross on the 25th of October, 1854, and he too had his charger killed in the wild melee. Assisted by Dr. Monatt, of the lumiskillen Dragoons, be succeeded in carrying Major Morris, of his own regiment, who lay dreadfully wounded, to a place of safety. In chatty rocollections such as those we baye tried to pen; and in tales of bair breath scapes in the hard days gone by, the time was pleasantly passed, and shortly before midnight the survivors of the "Six Hundred" separated, looking forward with joyous anticipation to a merry meeting on Balaklava Day,—Standard of September 23rd, Count Benst etates; in his report on the Saigon and Penang.
